Bean nematode beware

By PAT GROJEAN
In some Bootheel soybean fields, the cyst nematode is fighting a losing battle this season. Soybean plants which are protected by a soil fumigant nematocide are alive and healthy even in fields where nematode infestation has been bad in past years.

Soil fumigant nematocides are not new products, but they have just recently been approved for use on soybeans by the Environmental Protection Agency. Therefore, this is the first year that the fumigation method of fighting nematodes has been used outside of experimental fields on soybean farms in the Bootheel. And the results are dramatic.

Lloyd Winters, who is using a soil fumigant nematocide on the farm he operates feels that use of the product is the only way farmers are going to be able to grow soybeans from here south. "It is very important that young farmers find out about this," he added.

Shell Chemical Co. produces such a fumigant called Nemagon (DBCP) a Dow Chemical makes a fumigant called Fumazone 86E.

The cyst nematode is becoming an ever increasing problem throughout the Bootheel as well as other states in the Mid-South. The University of Missouri-Columbia Extension Division reports that soybean infestations are known to be present in 10 counties in the Delta region. Spread of the nematode has been dramatic and the cost to Delta farmers extensive, they report.

The nematode attacks the roots of soybeans, cutting off the food and water supply, thus choking the plants to death. The nematode forms a cyst on the hair roots of the plant through which the soybean obtains food. The cyst is only faintly perceptible without a microscope.

Farmers in the area had been using the Pickett variety of soybean which was developed to be non-resistant to the cyst nematode. But recently a new race of nematode, Race 4, has developed and it attacks even the soybean varieties that were resistant to the old race, Race 3.

The first symptom of cyst nematode injury in soybeans is the appearance of regular spots on a field where plants are stunted and yellowish in color.

Injury to a field varies with the nematode population and other field variables.

Winters, who used Nemagon this year in his 70-acre soybean field, explained that last year he planted York and Pickett beans, both of which were hurt by the Race 4 nematode. He explained that last year his yield was only 10-15 bushels per acre because of nematode damage.

This year he is predicting a harvest of 30 bushels per acre because of fumigation. He added this year's crop, without fumigation, probably would not have done as well this year as last year because of the degree of infestation in the field.

Dramatic results can be seen by comparing the test strips in Winters' field to the rest of the field. Winters injected no soil fumigant in six row areas throughout the field. In some of those test strips the soybean plants are very stunted and dying or dead, from nematode infestation while in the row next to the test strip, healthy, green plants are thriving.

Winters' field has been tested to compare the number of cysts on the roots of the soybeans in the treated parts of the field to those in the non-treated part. On the soybeans from untreated areas 40 to 50 cysts were found on a plant, while in the treated field, only one or two were found on a soybean plant. It takes about 40 per plant to damage the yield of the crop.

The results have convinced Winters to use the product from now on. Soil fumigation also has other benefits. By fumigating the soil the farmer can plant any variety of beans, including the higher yielding varieties.

If a farmer does not use a soil fumigant, the only other solution to getting a soybean crop from a nematode-infested field is to rotate crops.

Winters explained that he would not have planted soybeans in that particular field this year if it had not been for fumigation because the field was used for soybeans last year. He added that he would have had to grow another crop in the field for four years before See No. 3, page 12

Youth jailed after chase and crash

A 15-year-old Chicago juvenile was in city jail this morning after he narrowly escaped serious injury when his car hit a utility pole while he was being chased by police.

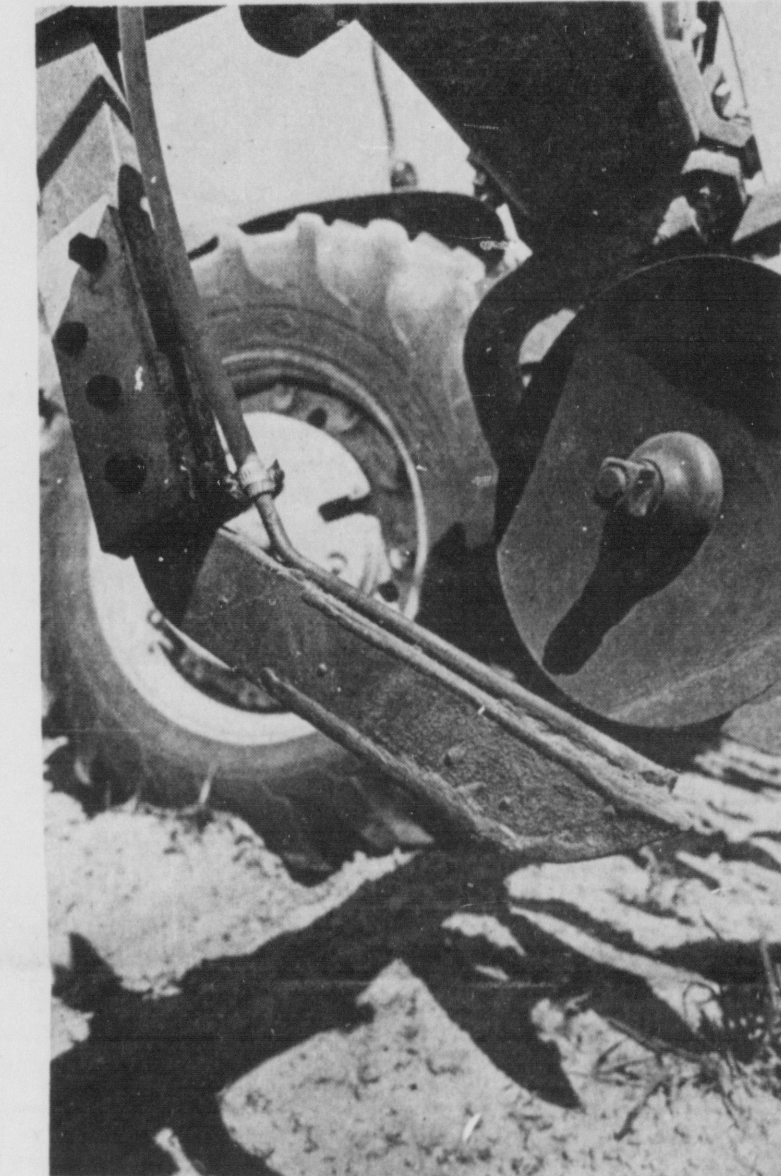

Police said patrolman John Blankenbaker spotted the youth as he made a U-turn on North Main Street in front of the Bootheel lounge. Blankenbaker followed the youth to the intersection of Main and Malone, where he turned West onto Malone and tried to outrun the police car. His car allegedly hit speeds of 100 miles per hour during the chase.

The youth slammed on his brakes at North West Street when he saw another patrol car coming toward him, police said, and tried to turn onto North West. He missed the turn and struck the utility pole, breaking it into four pieces.

He was treated and released from Missouri Delta Community Hospital for a minor head injury.

He was turned over to juvenile authorities following the accident.

New method for fighting nematode

Destruction of a soybean crop by the cyst nematode is a very real worry to farmers in the Bootheel, but a new method of fighting the nematode has recently been approved that of soil fumigation. The above photo shows dramatically what can happen to a nematode-infested field if not fumigated, the nematode has struck a six-row area on the right side of the field on a farm operated by Lloyd Winters which was not treated with Nemagon, a soil fumigant nematocide. The plants are very small or even dead. In the next row to the left, which was treated with the fumigant, soybean plants are healthy and tall. Lloyd Winters, right, (right photo) points out to Ken Smitten one of the cysts made by the nematode on the root of a soybean plant. The left photo shows one of the knives which is added to a six-row bedder to make application of the fumigant possible. Also added to the bedder are hoses, a pump and tank.

Job 'interviewer' sent on his way

A man who was taking fake job applications earlier this week has been placed on a bus and sent out of Sikeston, according to Scott County Sheriff's Office.

The man, Marion Dale Johnson, 51, of St. Petersburg, Fla., was arrested about noon Wednesday. He was released from custody about five hours later after police decided they did not have a case against him.

Johnson claimed to be a supervisor from the Travel Lodge Corp. and said he was interviewing people for jobs. He was staying at the Dunn Hotel at the time.

The first man he interviewed contacted the Federal Bureau of Investigation, which in turn contacted Sheriff John Dennis. Dennis called Sikeston police detective Dan Hinton and his deputy, Bud Jones.

Jones went to see Johnson about a job. Following the interview, Johnson was arrested and taken to the police station. Since he hadn't taken any money, police decided against arresting him and instead sent him on his way.

Patterson sentenced

ST. LOUIS — Roy D. Patterson of Lilbourn and Cookeville, Tenn., was sentenced by U. S. District Judge William H. Webster Thursday to three years in prison. He had previously pleaded guilty to willfully attempting to evade payment of his federal income tax.

Patterson, an advertising salesman, was ordered to serve the first six months of the sentence in a federal penitentiary with the balance of the sentence being suspended. Patterson was also placed on probation for five years, to begin following his jail time, and was fined $2,500, to be paid during the period of the probation.

He was granted a 10-day stay of execution of the sentence to get his affairs in order and was placed under a new $5,000 bond.

Patterson pleaded guilty Aug. 10 to one count of a five-count indictment. The other counts were dismissed.

Following the alleged attack, the younger sister said Jones talked to her sister and her for about five minutes, then left the house. She stated her sister told her "it happened again," and that she knew what her sister meant because "she had been done like that six other times."

Jones remains under $5,000 bond.

Rape suspect bound over

NEW MADRID—Johnnie H. Jones, 36, of Morrilton, Ark., was bound over to Circuit Court Thursday on a forcible rape charge following a brief preliminary hearing before Magistrate Leo Hedgepeth.

Testimony was heard from the complainant, a 19-year-old Portageville woman who charged her brother-in-law committed the offense at her home.

A younger sister of the complainant stated she was in a front room of the house watching after the complainant's baby. She said she could see the couple on a bed in the bedroom and it appeared the complainant was struggling with Jones.

She testified she could not hear anything being said between the two, and didn't hear Jones make any threats.

Grisso bound over after hearing on assault

CHARLESTON — Three preliminary hearings Thursday in Magistrate Court for Billy Wayne Grisso, 27, of Charleston Route Three resulted in Grisso being bound over to Circuit Court on charges of assault with intent to kill, breaking jail, stealing and two counts of burglary.

The first preliminary was for assault with intent to kill and a burglary charge. Testifying were Mrs. Elizabeth Webb and Mrs. Pinky Lee.

According to testimony by Mrs. Webb, she was in the kitchen of her home at 204 Court St. about 3:50 p.m. on May 4 when Grisso walked in through the back door. She said she asked him what he wanted and he replied, $1,200. After she told him she did not have the money, he reportedly told her to go to the bank for it and then asked for her purse. "When I would move, he would move, too, and I told him to go home before he got into trouble. I told him he might cause me to have a heart attack and he said he didn't care," Mrs. Webb said.

Telling Grisso she was going to let in her dog which was barking at the back door, she ran outside on the carport, followed by Grisso who began to hit her with his fists about the head and choked her, Mrs. Webb testified.

Her screams were heard by W. Clifton Banta Sr., who ran up the alley calling her name. At this point Grisso broke and ran between the Missouri Utilities and telephone office buildings toward the courthouse.

Mrs. Webb described how the man was dressed and identified a blue and white striped shirt and a pair of dark trousers as those worn by Grisso at the time of the incident.

According to her testimony, she was taken to Missouri Delta Community Hospital in Sikeston for treatment and has been in the hospital twice since that time for treatment of an equilibrium problem which causes her difficulty in walking. She said this problem was a result of the blows she received about the head.

Mrs. Lee testified she was crossing Court Street to her car which was parked on the south side of the courthouse when she heard dogs barking and Mrs. Webb's screams. She said she saw a boy run out from between the telephone and utility firm buildings and started toward him. He avoided her and ran through the south door of the courthouse.

Mrs. Lee said she did not see his face and could not swear that Grisso was the man she had seen running into the courthouse.

On cross examination, Mrs. Lee said she remembered the man had on a pink and white striped shirt with a floral design.

In the second preliminary on charges of breaking and entering and stealing, Deputy Sheriff Robert Smith and auxiliary policemen James Crane, Jackie Haley and Tommy Shrum were witnesses. The charges were in connection with break-ins at the courthouse and the theft of a tear gas gun from the office of Sheriff W. J. "Pedro" Simmons.

Smith testified he was off duty on May 4 but returned to the courthouse that evening about 8:50 p.m. when he was alerted that officers were needed.

He said he saw Grisso in the custody of Sheriff Simmons and James Crane on the first floor of the courthouse and that he searched Grisso later when he was taken to the sheriff's office. Smith said he found a page from a ledger book which is kept in Deputy Mike Baughman's desk and an envelope belonging to Sheriff Simmons in Grisso's pocket.

The blue and white striped shirt and dark trousers, entered into evidence by the state, were also identified by Smith as those which Grisso was wearing at the time of his arrest. A case, reportedly containing the tear gas gun taken from Simmons' office, was also identified by Smith.

On cross examination, Smith said he did not know when the gun was removed from the sheriff's office since he was off duty on May 4 but that it was there on May 3. According to Smith, Grisso was placed in a five-man lineup but neither Mrs. Lee nor Banta could positively identify him as the man they had seen running.

However, Smith said he and Sheriff Simmons took the same five men to the Sikeston hospital the following morning and that Mrs. Webb did positively identify Grisso as the man who had assaulted her.

Crane testified he was on duty as an auxiliary policeman the night of May 4 and was patrolling when the call came to go to the courthouse to assist Simmons. He said he apprehended Grisso as he came off the courthouse lawn at the southeast corner and placed him in his car.

Grisso was then taken into the courthouse where Simmons searched him and found a set of jail keys in his pocket, Crane said.

Haley and Shrum both testified they searched the courthouse grounds and found the tear gas gun under the hedges on the east side of the building, a pair of handcuffs and a pair of men's glasses. According to Shrum, he asked Grisso if the glasses were his and he answered yes, took them and put them on.

During the third preliminary, Gerald Phillips, Deputy Smith and city Patrolman Willis Cox were witnesses. The charge in this hearing was jail breaking.

According to Phillips' testimony, he and his girl friend, Beverly McKenzie, whose family lives in the jailer's quarters, were parked on the northeast side of the jail near the street on the night of June 19 when a man came out of nowhere and was on his knees on the sidewalk in front of the jail, attempting to crawl into some bushes.

Phillips said they went to help the man and he reportedly said, "I've broken my legs, get me out of here or I'll get 15 years for this."

Miss McKenzie went to the police station to summon help and Phillips said he and Willie Farquhar put the man in his truck until officers arrived.

Cox testified he went to the Phillips truck where Grisso was sitting and that it appeared both of the man's feet were broken. He said he examined the jail and found an iron mesh screen on one of the second story windows had been cut.

On cross examination, Cox said he could not testify that Grisso had jumped from the window or had been See No. 1 Page 12

Motorists planning summer travel needn't be intimidated by reports of localized gasoline shortages, according to the American Automobile Association.

AAA's advice to motorists is based on discussions with oil industry experts across the nation in response to inquiries about continuing gasoline distribution crunches in some areas. In fact, spokesmen for some major oil companies claim that most company dealers will have fuel supplies somewhat larger than they received last year, although occasional pinches may occur. This could mean, industry experts say, that some company dealers might feel the squeeze in this way: A motorist used to dealing with a particular oil company may find one company dealer without fuel at a given time, but another dealer with the same company a few blocks away will have a supply.

Lessened reserves probably will mean there will be little if any gasoline at cut-rate prices on the market this summer, but most independent dealers should have supplies at regular prices.

A Sikeston woman had so much faith in her doctor that when a woman complained her husband had whipped her, she recommended that the woman see this doctor about it.

If you have been puzzled by the latest move on prices, here's a report from a White House official on why the President decided to freeze prices for up to 60 days: "Sometimes you have political problems that have to be considered along with economic policy. There was a unanimous demand by the majority party in the Senate for a 90-day freeze. You couldn't ignore that. And for six straight days before the Nixon freeze, there were exceedingly strong price movements. We had to take action. We couldn't let it go until Phase 4 was ready."

"Would you guess," says the FINAST RECORD, published by First National Stores, Inc., "that trees are one of the greatest dangers to drivers? It's because they grow in the middle of roads! At least that's what 514,000 American drivers claimed last year when they hit one."

A great many people live long enough to overtake the "nice vacation" they intend to take "next year."

Hindsight. In Pittsburgh, Judge Joseph P. Willson disallowed the Pennsylvania Railroad's plea that Gandy Dancer Jesse Q. Casso had obtained a job under false pretenses, ruled that it was the railroad's fault for giving Casso a rating of 20-30 vision in his glass right eye.

When a Sikeston man started in business he was praised for his pluck, which turned out to be indifference toward the creditors who suffered from his failure.

Fated. In Camden, N. J., a judge recommended divorce for Mrs. Joseph Lane after she testified that her husband kept a revolver and a bullet marked with her initials, told her: "This bullet is especially for you, dear."

CHILLING GRAY
ZONE

Nineteen- hundred and sixty-two was not so long ago that most of us can't remember the Cuban incident when President Kennedy and the nation were squarely confronted with a nuclear threat, a mere 90 miles off the shores of the United States. Would Soviet missiles be withdrawn from Cuba in response to the President's ultimatum - or would there be war? The USSR backed down. Why? Because in 1962, the strategic military superiority of the United States was beyond question. Otherwise, the story could have ended far differently.

Today, outspoken leaders in public and private life are warning of the deteriorating U. S. military stature. One of the most outspoken, Mr. Willard F. Rockwell, Jr., chief executive officer of North American Rockwell Corporation, declares that, "This country's military standards gradually over the years to keep pace with new technological developments. The system has the great virtue of flexibility; the inspectorate looks at a particular situation in the round- the human factors as well as the economic and environmental. Occasionally, it will apply the common-sense principle: better a little pollution than a lot of unemployment. But this does not imply laxity; the basic objective remains, even if the timing and the means are open to discussion.

The system is not entirely voluntary, because offenders can be prosecuted and, sometimes are. But most of the time, there is little need to use the big stick. By and large, industry recognizes its social responsibilities and acts accordingly.

There are cynics who think that all this amounts to a cozy little conspiracy between industry and government, and that, while paying hypocritical lip service to government requirements, industry continues on its heedless way, caring for nothing but profits. But the figures tell a different story.

Over the last decade, for instance, British industry has spent some 400 million pounds on emission-control equipment. Or take a more specific example. Before the Second World War, in Stoke-on-Trent (the center of our pottery industry), there were 2,000 coal-fired ovens belching impurities into the atmosphere. This was accepted as a way of life. But by the mid-1960s, the whole lot had been replaced by electric or oil-fired ovens. And the city has been transformed.

Similar victories can be claimed at cement works and electricity stations. Over the period 1958-70, solid-matter emissions from cement works, fell from 200,000 tons a year to 36,000 tons. In the case of electricity, grit and dust emissions fell over roughly the same period from about 1 million tons a year to 200,000 tons-- and that despite a 50 per cent increase in coal usage over the period. I have said that emissions "fell"; but there was nothing accidental about it-- they had to be pushed.

I won't deal in any detail with the quite dramatic success we have had in controlling smoke emissions from domestic fires and the effect on urban amenity. The problem didn't get serious attention until the early 1950s. But since 1956, when the Clean Air Act was passed, a system of smoke-control orders has been gradually extended over the country, mainly, of course, in urban areas. At present, more than 5 million premises are covered by such orders, and the effect on urban amenity has been remarkable.

I turn now to the other main pollution battlefield-- water. Britain has tended in the past to take its water for granted, but can no longer afford to do so. Demand is likely to double over the next 30 years, and water must therefore be regarded as an increasingly expensive raw material. As an important consequence, we shall have to impose increasingly stringent conditions on industrial discharges into our rivers. But here again, we intend to move forward in cooperation with industry.

The position at present is relatively satisfactory. In 1970, we undertook a comprehensive survey of the condition of all our rivers-- the largest exercise of its kind in the world-- and the results were encouraging. Between 1958 and 1970 the percentage of our rivers classified as free of pollution rose from 73 per cent to 76 per cent-- from about 14,600 miles to 17,000 miles. At the dirtier end of the scale, the prospect is slipping into a gray zone, surrounded by a sea of unfavorable statistics. In national defense we're no longer first." He quotes U. S. Senator James Buckley. In the words of the Senator, "The United States is rapidly reaching a point ... where we will soon no longer have the military capacity to back up our foreign policy decisions." Recent news reports telling of the flight of a new and highly superior Soviet bomber are a reminder that U. S. B-52's will be more than 25 years old before they can be replaced with a counterpart of the Soviet bomber. America's swing-wing bomber, the B-1, will not be test-flown until the spring of 1974.

Mr. Rockwell, in urging fellow Americans to stop the downhill slide of U. S. military strength, told of flying over a great American city with its schools, universities, military installations, factories and homes. Noting that it was only one city in only one state of all America, he concluded: "Multiply that sight a thousand times, and you have a human and technical treasure whose equal has never before been assembled on the face of this earth. It's our responsibility to safeguard that national treasure."

NEW YORK CITY:
AN ECONOMIC PARASITE
The largest city in the United States has become an economic parasite on the rest of the country.

The government of the city of New York spends more than $10 billion a year, more than the entire budget of the State of California. Of that gigantic sum, over $2 billion comes from the U. S. taxpayer. Yet the working New Yorker carries the heaviest individual tax load of any U. S. citizen.

About a quarter of New York City's budget goes for welfare handouts and more than a quarter for education. The $2 billion in federal tax money that pours into the big city is divided about the same. Although during the past fiscal year, for the first time in many years, the number of people on welfare in New York actually fell, welfare expenditures rose regardless running $180 million over the amount budgeted. A substantial proportion of these funds go to able-bodied young people from 17 to 21 still classified as "dependent children."

The school system in New York, on which so much money has been lavished, is a national disgrace. Its pupils score among the lowest in the country on standardized tests of basic skills. Six years ago the New York City Board of Education decided to "phase out" vocational education which might have trained young people for useful and needed jobs.

The "social engineers" have had their day in New York. Their failure has been complete. If this city is not forever to remain dependent on productive citizens elsewhere, a completely new philosophy is needed in its social services and its schools.

Clearing the Air:
In Britain, the Environmentalists Wreck No Industry

WASHINGTON--- I'm deeply devoted to the British politico. With exception for the rare extremist, British political leaders rarely attempt to skewer each other. It isn't always Disraeli and Gladstone. But it's almost always bloody sensible.

Thus with environmentalists charging all over America, getting into the energy crisis, dirty air and industrial safety, I turned to one of Britain's most respected leaders and asked just how it's being handled in the United Kingdom. He is Geoffrey Rippon, Prime Minister Ed Heath's Cabinet member in charge of ecology.

Here is what he wrote to me:
By the Right Honorable Geoffrey Rippon, Secretary of State for the Environment

LONDON--- Like many other countries, Britain today is engaged in a strenuous battle to preserve and improve its environment. I do not claim that we are winning this battle hands down. But I do believe that we are making a lot of headway. And for this a lot of the credit must go to a long tradition of cooperation and compromise between government and industry.

In case this should sound too complacent, let me say that I do not dismiss out of hand the many predictions of environmental apocalypse which we have heard so often in recent years. These must be studies and explored-- coolly and scientifically. But meanwhile, the end of the world is not yet with us, and we have time to improve our defenses.

Before describing some of the action we have taken, I should like to make one thing clear. The British government does not believe that we can improve the environment by restraining economic growth. I reject the false logic of this point of view.

What we need is more growth, more wisely used. If our pollution problem in Britain in recent years has not been tackled as ferociously as might have been wished, it is precisely because our rate of growth has been not too high, but too low. Inadequate growth reduces options, and the environment suffers along with everything else.

I turn now to some of the things we have been doing. Clear air, first of all. Clean air is a rather emotive subject and industry and technology are often portrayed as the villains of the piece, rapacious and irresponsible.

But as far as Britain is concerned, this is far from the truth, I am glad to say. To a large extent, this is because we have been in the business of controlling industrial emission for more than a hundred years. In 1863, the government of Lord Palmerston wisely decided to set up a body called the Alkali Inspectorate with the job of controlling emissions from certain industrial processes of the time. Since then, the activities of this organization have been gradually extended, and it is now responsible for controlling all harmful and offensive emissions from British industry.

Right from the start, the policy has been one of cooperation with industry, and this has paid off handsomely. The acts of Parliament under which the inspectorate operates have never specified precise technical standards to be attained. If they did, they would have to be constantly rewritten.

What they lay down is that industry must use the "best practicable means" to control emissions. Armed with this general principle, the inspectors are able to push up standards gradually over the years to keep pace with new technological developments. The system has the great virtue of flexibility; the inspectorate looks at a particular situation in the round- the human factors as well as the economic and environmental. Occasionally, it will apply the common-sense principle: better a little pollution than a lot of unemployment. But this does not imply laxity; the basic objective remains, even if the timing and the means are open to discussion.

The system is not entirely voluntary, because offenders can be prosecuted and, sometimes are. But most of the time, there is little need to use the big stick. By and large, industry recognizes its social responsibilities and acts accordingly.

There are cynics who think that all this amounts to a cozy little conspiracy between industry and government, and that, while paying hypocritical lip service to government requirements, industry continues on its heedless way, caring for nothing but profits. But the figures tell a different story.

Over the last decade, for instance, British industry has spent some 400 million pounds on emission-control equipment. Or take a more specific example. Before the Second World War, in Stoke-on-Trent (the center of our pottery industry), there were 2,000 coal-fired ovens belching impurities into the atmosphere. This was accepted as a way of life. But by the mid-1960s, the whole lot had been replaced by electric or oil-fired ovens. And the city has been transformed.

Similar victories can be claimed at cement works and electricity stations. Over the period 1958-70, solid-matter emissions from cement works, fell from 200,000 tons a year to 36,000 tons. In the case of electricity, grit and dust emissions fell over roughly the same period from about 1 million tons a year to 200,000 tons-- and that despite a 50 per cent increase in coal usage over the period. I have said that emissions "fell"; but there was nothing accidental about it-- they had to be pushed.

I won't deal in any detail with the quite dramatic success we have had in controlling smoke emissions from domestic fires and the effect on urban amenity. The problem didn't get serious attention until the early 1950s. But since 1956, when the Clean Air Act was passed, a system of smoke-control orders has been gradually extended over the country, mainly, of course, in urban areas. At present, more than 5 million premises are covered by such orders, and the effect on urban amenity has been remarkable.

I turn now to the other main pollution battlefield-- water. Britain has tended in the past to take its water for granted, but can no longer afford to do so. Demand is likely to double over the next 30 years, and water must therefore be regarded as an increasingly expensive raw material. As an important consequence, we shall have to impose increasingly stringent conditions on industrial discharges into our rivers. But here again, we intend to move forward in cooperation with industry.

The position at present is relatively satisfactory. In 1970, we undertook a comprehensive survey of the condition of all our rivers-- the largest exercise of its kind in the world-- and the results were encouraging. Between 1958 and 1970 the percentage of our rivers classified as free of pollution rose from 73 per cent to 76 per cent-- from about 14,600 miles to 17,000 miles. At the dirtier end of the scale, the percentage of rivers classified as grossly polluted fell from 6.4 per cent (about 1,280 miles) to 4.3 per cent (about 950 miles). And the figures for 1972 tell a story of further improvement.

If further evidence of improvement were needed, the Thames provides it. For many years, pollution has driven even the hardest fish species from the lower reaches of the Thames. But now more than 50 species are being caught, and the Greater London Council holds regular angling competitions.

We intend to maintain the momentum of this progress. Over the next five years, central and local government will be spending close to 1,000 million pounds on sewerage improvements. At the same time, we are in the midst of a massive overhaul of the structure of our water and sewerage services. At present, these are in the hands of about 1,400 separate agencies, but as from next April, these will be replaced by no more than 10 Regional Water authorities covering the whole of England and Wales.

With immense resources at their disposal, the new authorities will be able to ensure a gradual intensification of standards. I predict with complete confidence that this will not involve confrontation with industry, but rather constructive cooperation towards mutually agreed objectives.

In dealing with industry, the British government has one important weapon in its arsenal which is denied to many other governments. That is our comprehensive system of planning control. In Britain, with a rather high ration of people to space, the government has the last word on what can or cannot be built in any particular area-- whether it be factories, shops, houses, offices, golf courses or funfairs. We can, therefore, ensure that environmental considerations are taken fully into account in such decisions.

It is not simply a question of forbidding industry to build in a particular area. We can also use the perhaps more valuable device of allowing industry to go ahead, but at the same time attaching very stringent conditions to this permission. For example, we have allowed mining companies to mine for potash on the edges of one of our national parks-- the North Yorkshire Moors. But environmentally, the companies must comply with some very demanding requirements, particularly as regards waste disposal. If these were not to be met, the operation could be closed down.

So we have power if power is needed. But the path of voluntary cooperation is always preferable if it is available. For one thing, it can prevent needless bureaucracy and detailed state control, and, secondly, it involves industry in a working partnership with government towards desirable social objectives. Some fields in which we have pursued this philosophy (apart from those already mentioned) include the control of pesticides, the dumping of wastes at sea and the reduction of lead content in petrol.

The British government is not naively innocent about industry. We recognize that there will always be those who pursue crude self-interest and short-term gain at the expense of larger national objectives.

But in all essential respects, the picture often drawn of permanent conflict between government and industry is a false one. Each has special interests and responsibilities, and sometimes different immediate objectives. But they are in fact partners with the same broad goal-- national prosperity and well-being in the fullest sense of those terms.

Confessional box in trouble

NEW YORK (AP) — From the Vatican to local parishes, Roman Catholicism is striving to develop new ways for its people to express repentance and realize God's forgiveness in the face of dwindling use of the old-style confessional "box."

The traditional practice of private confession is in deep trouble, says the Rev. James Shaughnessy, director of a liturgical research center at University of Notre Dame.

"It suffers from a malaise that has all but eliminated private confession from the regular life of most practicing Catholics," he said.

Numerous surveys indicate confessional lines have shrunk 40 to 80 per cent in parishes across the country.

"People just do not go, or they go so much less than the total number of confessions is down by half or more," said the Rev. Joseph T. Nolan of Los Angeles. "The whole practice has eroded."

Various causes are cited for the decline. Among them are a broadened concept of sin as being corporate as well as personal and existing in attitudes and not just external individual acts, and disillusionment with the so-called "vending machine" procedure for confessing sin.

"A great many people have moved away from the notion of sin as a kind of grocery list of isolated acts," said the Rev. Joseph Champlin, a liturgical specialist and Fulton, N. Y., pastor.

He added that they've increasingly thought "something wrong with the routine, monotonous, mechanical type of confession in which you repeated the same list of offenses you had been confessing for years, received the same penance of a few 'Hail Marys' and 'Our Fathers' and left the church without being touched deeply by any part of the process."

Some, particularly the young, also resent the anonymity of the long-time confessional box, the small, darkened booth in which the penitent kneels to recite his misdeeds through grill to an unseen priest.

The Vatican's Congregation of Divine Worship is expected to issue a new rite for the sacrament of penance and absolution (forgiveness). (At the same time, new approaches are cropping up in many places.)

"Priests and people are trying to find ways to express the sacrament more clearly," said the Rev. Thomas Krosnicki, associate director of the liturgical department of the U.S. Catholic Conference in Washington, D.C.

"One of the most common new forms is the use of a conference room where the penitent speaks face to face with the priest, rather than being in the confessional box."

The new setting, as developed by Father Champlin's Holy Family Church in Fulton, is called a "reconciliation room" and gives people an option of talking directly with the priest or from a chair or kneeler behind a screen.

Increasingly, dioceses and parishes also are inaugurating communal or congregational confession services to bring out interpersonal realities both of sin and forgiveness — a method long used by Protestants.

However, they generally are used as a supplement to private confession, not substitute for it, since Catholic church rules require private confession at least once a year, and, in cases of grave sin, before receiving communion. In some cases, however, the communal services also include collective absolution (assurance of forgiveness) — a method authorized in Montreal, Que., and six other Quebec dioceses for two weeks preceding Easter and before last Christmas.

Under Vatican rules, such temporary usages are allowed when the number of confessors is considered too large for available priests to hear in proper manner individually, providing that private confession of serious sin be made at the first opportunity later.

Under the provisions, Bishop Francis T. Hurley of Alaska has used communal confession and absolution widely in his far-flung, sparsely churched diocese.

Such collective absolution previously was reserved in the modern era to emergency cases, such as for troops going into battle, but it was common in the early years of Christianity as it still is in eastern churches.

Money doesn't grow on trees, but trees thrive on money — for pruning, for fertilizer, for water

Scripture: Mark 2: 16, 17; Galatians 5: 25-6: 5

REDEPTIVE LOVE IN ACTION

Accepting and serving persons in all conditions of need is costly. It becomes a difficult duty to adopt Christ's attitude and strategy for reaching the outcasts of society.

Tax collectors and sinners were long the outcasts of the Old Testament society. Thus it was no surprise when the scribes were upset when Jesus sat down to eat with such persons.

The reply from Jesus sets the stage for today's lesson. "Those who are well have no need of a physician, but those who are sick: I came not to call the righteous, but sinners."

Paul's preachings to the Galatians represent his fervent feelings against those who reject the teachings of Jesus.

In Paul's days many of the persons came under the influence of a false "gospel," as people do even today. Such activity made Paul angry and he reflects this in Galatians.

Paul tried to make it clear that we are utterly dependent on the power of God's spirit so why fight it. Why should anyone attempt to go counter to God's purpose? God has offered us freedom, purpose and His love. It was beyond Paul's imagination that anyone would ever think of rejecting such a proposition for eternal life.

We show this acceptance through our willingness to become involved with other persons, accepting them and identifying with them.

Unfortunately, too many of us become so self-righteous that we are unable to help those in need of self-control. Apathy, too, is responsible for many of our difficulties.

When we "bear one another's burdens," we achieve God's desires for us. We bear such burdens through understanding others and sharing in their goal to achieve rehabilitation.

Briefly we can return to the scribes and their complaints. Everything they did was in line with the Old Testament traditions, with all social and business contacts associated with moral and religious teachings.

Frequently, they were so concerned with the minor details that they overlooked the real significance of Jesus' teachings. In some ways they were similar in their narrowness of thought to some of the early church leaders in our New England colonies.

Yet Jesus made it clear. Some persons were following His teachings. Others were not, or were having extreme difficulty in following His words. Certainly the latter group needed His help, friendship, and forgiveness.

Redemptive love in action places great emphasis on personal contacts. Jesus demonstrated this. In our "coffee house" ministry we seek the same today. The goal is still designed to take the ministry to the persons needing forgiveness and sympathy.

Martin Luther wrote that "God delights in our temptations, and yet hates them; He delights in them when they drive us to prayer; He hates them when they drive us to despair."

Service becomes a key word. It is the goal we all should seek. After we have placed ourselves under God's leadership, we need then to lead others the same way.

However, how do we react when a friend gets into trouble? In many instances we merely stand aside and gossip about him. The Scripture, however, commands us to "get involved" and do something to help the person.

With spiritual maturity and experience we can handle such situations. Jesus, however, wants us to react this way because of our love for our neighbor, not merely to gain personal recognition or public acclaim.

To conquer oneself is a tremendous challenge. It can be accomplished only through one's willingness to accept God and His teachings.

Assemblies of God notes 5.4 percent increase

SPRINGFIELD — In contrast to denominations that recorded membership declines during the past year, the Assemblies of God has reported a 5.4 per cent increase for 1972 and growth of 3 per cent for the first half of 1973.

According to the Rev. Bartlett Peterson, general secretary, last year's growth pushed adult membership in the denomination to more than 700,000 for the first time.

He reported that inclusive membership, adult members plus "adherents" is now 1.1 million in the United States. Foreign membership has soared even more, with a 10.7 per cent increase last year to bring the total up to 3.9 million.

In the United States, districts that had the highest growth rates for the Assemblies of God last year were North Carolina (21.4 per cent), Hawaii (20.1), South Texas (17.9), Kentucky (15.2) and Iowa (14.2).

The denomination has 8,871 congregations in the United States.

Baptists to name permanent leader

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Selection of a new executive director and discussion of a financial audit by a Springfield firm were the main items of business here today for leaders of the Missouri Baptist Convention.

The 51-member executive board will meet in the afternoon to name a successor to the late Dr. Earl O. Harding, the executive director for 19 years.

The Rev. Dr. Harding, who died two weeks ago of a heart attack, had been questioned about the convention's financial situation and about his use of future housing allowances to buy a house.

Before he died, Harding paid back about $40,000 and secured a housing loan from a bank. The Rev. Dr. Harding had been advanced $62,500 in 1968.

Dr. H. L. McClanahan, a top assistant on the convention staff in Jefferson City, is serving as acting director.

The Rev. Dr. McClanahan, 63, was born in Hayti and has spent most of his ministry as pastor and director for churches of the Black River Baptist Association of Kennett.

The Missouri Baptist Convention has about 600,000 members.

The Rev. Dr. McClanahan was named acting executive secretary by the association's executive committee chaired by attorney Jim Ford of Kennett. The Rev. Dr. McClanahan lived in Kennett until his appointment in December 1971 as assistant to the Rev. Dr. Harding, who died Aug. 12.

The Rev. Dr. McClanahan was reared in Hayti and was employed as a bookkeeper, tax consultant and store manager until he entered the ministry in 1940. He pastored several small churches and continued working until 1942 when he began full-time pastoral work.

He served as associational missionary in the New Madrid Association and was director of missions for the Black River Baptist Association for 24 years with offices in Kennett.

The Rev. Dr. McClanahan has written numerous articles for Sunday School Board publications and was recognized over the convention as a Sunday School expert. In 1967, he received the Kennett newspaper's Citizen of the Year Award and in 1970 he received the Distinguished Baptist Minister's Citation from Southern Baptist College of Walnut Ridge, Ark. He was awarded an honorary doctor of divinity degree from William Jewell College.

His appointment to the top ranking post of the Baptist Convention was made Aug. 14 at a special meeting called by chairman Ford.

THE BIBLE
97. Joshua's Farewell

When Joshua, now an old man, felt that he was nearing the end of his life, he called the people of Israel together at Shechem. He then reviewed for them the history of the nation of Israel.

Joshua exhorted the people to remain faithful to the Lord and not to return to the false gods their ancestors once worshipped. He warned them that to turn away from the Lord would invite destruction. And all the people answered that they would serve the Lord God and obey His voice.

"So Joshua made a covenant with the people that day, and set them a statute and an ordinance in Shechem. And Joshua wrote these words in the book of the law of God, and took a great stone, and set it up there under an oak, that was by the sanctuary of the Lord." (Joshua 24:25-26)

Afterwards, the people departed, and Joshua, the son of Nun, died at the age of 110. Eleazar, the son of Aaron, died soon thereafter. Both were buried in Ephraim.

Dawson eliminated

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. — Sikeston's Tom Dawson bowed out of the 66th Annual Missouri men's Amateur golf championship tournament Thursday, losing to Steve Adkisson of St. Louis, 4 and 3.

Dawson grabbed the first round lead of the tournament Tuesday with an even par 72.

While Dawson was packing his clubs to head back to Southeast Missouri, a fellow Bootheel linkster, Luther "Buddy" Godwin of Poplar Bluff, was moving into the quarterfinals by upsetting Charles Morgan of St. Louis, who beat defending champion Don Bliss in first round play Thursday.

Bruce Hollowell of Springfield, Mo., medalist in the 66th Annual Missouri men's Amateur Golf Championship Tournament, has won his way into the quarterfinals of match play.

Hollowell carded rounds of 70-72 for medal honors. He downed Bob Cochran, St. Louis, 5-4 in second round match play Thursday after beating Payne Stewart of Springfield, 4 and 3 in the first round.

Hollowell is slated to meet Tom Tessary, of Granite City, Ill., today. Tessary defeated Bob Enger, Kansas City, 1-up in 22 holes in the first round Thursday and then beat Dale Kutz, another Kansas Citian, 2 and 1 in the afternoon round.

Charles Morgan, St. Louis, beat defending champion Don Bliss, St. Louis, in first round play Thursday, 3 and 2, but was defeated by Luther Godwin, Poplar Bluff, 5 and 4, in the second. Godwin will meet Robert Mason, St. Louis, in the quarterfinals.

Mason won Thursday over Byron Connell, Jackson, Mo., 1-up in the first round and beat Paul Hooser, Jefferson City, 3 and 2 in the afternoon.

Bill Stewart, Springfield, winner over Ron Brewer, St.

Louis, 2 and 1 in the first round, and over Spenny Sappington, St. Louis, 1-up in 20 holes in the second, will play today against Peter Beardsley, St. Louis, winner over Jody DeLong, Jefferson City, 2-up and James Mason, St. Louis, 2 and 1 Thursday.

In the other quarterfinal, A.J. Kroeger, Jefferson City, will meet Dennis Green, St. Louis, 6 and 4 in the first round and Steve Adkisson, St. Louis, 4 and 2 in the second. Green defeated Don Placke, St. Louis, 1-up in the morning round, and beat Sid Salomon III, St. Louis, 2 and 1 in the second.

Cape battles back

MOORHEAD, Minn. — Missouri American Legion baseball champions, Cape Girardeau, remained alive in the Central Plains Regional baseball tournament Thursday afternoon, eliminating Winfield, Kan., 8-4.

Steve Volkerding connected for a three run homer in the fifth inning to break open a close battle. Cape scored four runs in the first to give their ace left-hander, Trae Hastings, and early lead. Blain Nagel connected for a three run triple in the opening frame.

Hastings gave up only six hits during the nine inning encounter, fanning nine on the way. He got into trouble in the fourth when Winfield scored three of its four runs.

Grant Dambach, a Missouri prep All-Stater from Libbourn, led Cape's hit parade with two safeties. Bruce Warren was credited with the loss.

Richfield, Minn., went into extra innings for a second consecutive day Thursday to notch a Central Plains Regional baseball victory behind the hitting of versatile Brian Denmar.

Denmar lined a two-out bases-loaded single up the middle in the 14th inning as the Minnesota American Legion Kings defeated Omaha, Neb., 3-2 in the winners' bracket of the double-elimination tournament.

"He's a good one to have batting," said Richfield Coach Brian Kispert.

Denmar singled in the winning run Wednesday in Richfield's first-round 4-3, 11-inning victory over Cape Girardeau, Mo., and went the distance pitching. The 6-foot-4, 195-pound Denmar moved behind the plate in Thursday's game and caught the entire contest.

"That's the first time he's Denmar caught all year," Kispert said. "We're hurt right now. Our first two catchers weren't available tonight."

The Minnesota titlists meet Council Bluffs, Iowa, today in the lone matchup of unbeaten teams. Council Bluffs, 16-2, advanced unbeaten with a winners' bracket 2-0 victory over host Moorhead.

Council Bluffs won despite a no-hitter by Moorhead's Mark Houtari, who was plagued with wildness. Houtari walked nine batters, hit two and unranked five wild pitches.

Williston, N. D., eliminated Rapid City, S. D., 7-3 and Cape Girardeau eliminated Winfield, Kan., 8-4 Thursday.

Cape Girardeau faced Moorhead in today's opener while Omaha was pitted against Williston followed by unbeaten Richfield and Council Bluffs.

HR hitting formula

Bill Robinson, his rocky major league career once a source of frustration and worry, has finally discovered the formula for hitting homers.

"It's just a case of relaxing and making contact with the ball," the Philadelphia Phillies player explains.

He relaxed at the plate Thursday night and drove in three runs with two homers, propelling the Phillies to a 6-3 National League baseball triumph over the San Diego Padres.

In other NL games during Thursday's light schedule, Los Angeles trimmed the New York Mets 5-4 and the Chicago Cubs beat the Cincinnati Reds 4-3. In the only American League contest, California downed Milwaukee 6-3.

Robinson was touted as a new super-slugger when he first joined the New York Yankees in 1967. He never lived up to the advance fanfare, batting a dismal .196. He lasted two more seasons in New York, then made the circuit of minor league teams and almost quit after failing to make the Chicago White Sox two years ago.

"Then I just decided to go out and have some fun," Robinson recalled about that depressing stage of his career. "If I had a bad game I didn't worry about it."

However, his new-found philosophy appeared faulty after he managed only four hits in 32 times at bat during a recent road trip.

"I thought, why me?" he said. "After I finally made it, I thought I was going to blow it. But I sat down and had a long talk with myself."

Robinson's first blast, a two-run shot, capped a four-run Phils first and then followed Greg Luzinski's homer with a solo homer in the sixth.

Cubs 4, Reds 3
Don Kessinger drove home the winning run with a 10th-inning single. The Cubs tied the game 3-3 after the Reds had pulled ahead in their half of the 10th.

"I just tried to find a hole because it meant the ball game," Kessinger said his winning hit that scored Randy Hundley from third. "Any kind of a base hit would have won it."

Dodgers 5, Mets 4
Joe Ferguson laced a runcoring double in the sixth inning, breaking a tie and lifting the Dodgers to a victory that increased their lead in the NL West to three games over Cincinnati.

Angels 6, Brewers 3
Brewer relief pitcher Chris Short issued a bases-loaded walk to Sandy Alomar, forcing in the winning during a five-run Angel seventh inning. The winning run came after Short, who replaced starter Billy Champion who was forced out after breaking a finger nail on his pitching hand, permitted the winning run to score after hitting Winston Llenas with a pitch.

Young gets call

CHAFFEE — Illmo-Scott City and Jackson hooked up in an extra inning duel Thursday night to highlight action in the Chaffee Little League invitational baseball tournament.

ISC had to go eight innings before subduing Jackson, 6-5, to move into the semifinals of the 11-12 year old division. Scott Wadlington picked up the win. Jackson out-hit their opponents 8-6.

Sikeston had to call upon Jeff Young to put out a sixth inning Charleston rally and preserve a 7-6 win to move into the semifinals. Young came into the game with one out and the bases loaded in the sixth and struck out the next two batters. Sikeston opened up a 2-0 lead in the first but Charleston batted back to close the margin and stayed close until the final out.

Scott Campbell picked up the win for Sikeston and helped his own cause with two hits, including a double. Mike Brashears and Russell Deal connected for two hits apiece as Sikeston batsmen collected 12 safeties.

Chaffee rallied for six runs in the sixth inning to defeat Benton, 9-4, despite being out hit 7-4. Randy Horrell picked up the win while Joe Vinyard was credited with the loss.

Tournament action resumes today at 5 p.m.

Chaffee tennis results

CHAFFEE — Charles Tucker of Bloomfield and Herman Margrave of Chaffee hooked up in an exciting match during action in the Chaffee Open Tennis match Thursday. Tucker won the event 6-4 and 7-6 with the final set going to the break point and 9 point tie breaker.

Rob Weeks of Cape Girardeau turned back Scott Loff of Cape 6-1 and 6-0 in the other singles competition. In doubles play, Frank Enderle and Charles Goddard of Chaffee were beaten by Mark Enderle and David Summers of Chaffee 6-3 and 6-4. Rob Weeks and Scott Loff defeated Fielding Potashnick and Terry Conn of Sikeston, 6-4 and 6-4. Ken Anderson and Bob Fields of Sikeston teamed to eliminate Charlie Mantel and Mark Rhodes of Chaffee, 6-0 and 6-4. Herman and Larry Margrave of Chaffee defeated Larry Dooley and Mike Johnson, 6-0 and 6-1.

Semifinal round play will be held tonight at the city courts located at Harmon field. Action gets underway at 7 p.m. with the singles and doubles at around 8.

Neighborhoods profit from Youth Corps work programs

CANALOU — Ten teenagers from low-income families are completing a summer in Canolou working under the sponsorship of the Neighborhood Youth Corps.

Part of their summer work consisted of cleaning the inside and painting the combination city jail and library; cleaning up a 100 foot section of abandoned road, and helping load 20 junk cars to be hauled off.

The NYC program is designed to help the teenagers from low income families get summer work and at the same time help communities get work done that they normally could not do.

The teenagers are Jeff Fulcher, 14, and his brother Mike, 16, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Fulcher; Gerald Wheatley, 15, and his brother Earl, 14, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Wheatley; April Watson, 14, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Preston Watson; Allen Basinger, 17, son of Delbert Basinger, of Canolou; Ricky Childress, 16, son of Mr. and Mrs. Eddie Childress of Matthews; and Hollie Haner, 14, Butch Edsall, 14, and James Edsall, 17, children of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Hunter of Sikeston. The NYC area counselor is Dorothy Colson of East Prairie. The program has been supervised by Genevieve Latham and J. D. Basinger, both of Canolou, who were unpaid volunteers.

The program calls for the teenagers to put in 234 hours at 40 hours per week, for $1.60 per hour.

Mrs. Latham said, "I feel like this program is one of the greatest things the government has done. It gives the teenagers a chance to earn their own money and have a great feeling of accomplishment."

The project began July 27 and ends today.

Mrs. Latham said the appointment in Canolou "is amazing. Before the project started, Canolou was slowly deteriorating, but now it is almost the town you could remember 10 years ago."

Beard death by natural causes

MARSTON — New Madrid County Coroner Gene Clayton attributed the death of Dave Beard, 67, who collapsed and died about 8:30 a.m. today at his home, to natural causes.

Beard, who had suffered a stroke seven years ago, was stricken while talking to his wife Della, Clayton said.

The body was removed to Ponder Funeral Home in Lilbourn where arrangements are incomplete.

another year of soybeans, if he had not fumigated.

Winters has also found that Nemagon has a pleasant side effect. He said that he has 95-100 per cent cocklebur control in the treated field. Nemagon also controls pigweed. Both these weeds can be dangerous to soybeans by sapping food and water away from the plant.

Manufacturers of the product foresee no problem with the nematode muting in resistance to the soil fumigant nematocide.

Method of application of the product is extremely important, since its efficiency can be diminished if it is not planted deep enough. The fumigant, which is used in the ratio of 3/4 gallon chemical to one gallon water per acre, is injected six to eight inches below the soybean seed. (The seed is planted about 1 1/2 inches below the surface.)

Winters found it ideal to put the fumigant down as the field is bedded. If rain occurs before the field is planted, the fumigant will not be affected if it has been inserted properly.

The current problem with the soil fumigant is equipment for application to the field. Present farm equipment can be adapted without much trouble. To completely equip machinery, less six-row bedder, it would cost about $700. To adapt a present spraying system would cost approximately $420, or about $65 to $70 a row, including labor. Adapting of equipment can be done by equipment companies or by the farmer himself.

The chemical itself costs approximately $7 to $7.50 an acre which, as Winters pointed out, was a bushel of beans at one time.

To the bedder, a knife is added for each row, a tank, and pump plastic hoses to carry the solution under pressure into the soil. Aluminum tanks are not recommended for the chemical, and a stainless steel or galvanized tank should be used.

The product has been on the market for 20-25 years and has been used very successfully on other crops such as tomatoes. It is used on cotton around the Kennett area.

PROGRESS— PROGRESS!!

After 3 weeks of hard work, the dust and dirt, the grease and grime are about gone. The painters have come and gone and left us with a fresh new look and a bright orange door.

Sparkie has the Parts Department under control and is busy putting away thousands of parts. Ralph has the shop cleaned and is getting the shop equipment ready for service work. Frank has been busy rounding up tractors and other pieces of Oliver equipment and is getting them ready for our GRAND OPENING!

We even have our new sign up on the front of the store so you can find us easily.

All plans are progressing smoothly toward our "Big O" Day. Watch for the announcement of our Grand Opening
